

Dear Friend:

1 in 5 New Jersey children are currently food insecure and 12% of New Jersey residents suffer from hunger. Our most basic human need is healthy, fresh food. As a dynamic grassroots organization, America's Grow-a-Row's impact is resonating throughout the entire state of New Jersey by addressing the complex problems of hunger and food insecurity through a unique approach that integrates the efforts of an extensive network of volunteers; the growing, gleaning, and distribution of free fresh, healthy produce; and the implementation of a comprehensive hunger and nutrition education program. We are the only organization in NJ tackling these issues from multiple angles. Reducing the number of people who suffer from hunger requires significant resources, both financial and human. Over the past eleven years, each and every dollar of individual and corporate donations has generated 2 pounds (8 servings) of farm-fresh produce for someone in need of healthy food. We have donated over 2.5 million pounds of fresh produce since our inception in 2002.

This year we have doubled our volume to over 840,000 pounds of free fresh produce delivered, doubled our number of free farm markets offered, and doubled the number of youths educated.

The mission of America's Grow-a-Row is to:

- Provide fresh produce to those in need
- Educate people of all generations about hunger and ways to help
- Introduce our youth to farming and healthy eating
- Cultivate tomorrow's leaders to give back
- Contribute to the sustainability of agriculture

We are contacting you to ask your support of our Farm to Fork Fundraiser at the LifeCamp in Pottersville, New Jersey on May 10, 2014. This unique fundraiser features local food artisans, a farm fresh dinner and fine auctions.

We invite you to support America's Grow-a-Row!

There are several ways to participate in this outstanding event: 1) Donate a product or service from your business to be used in our auctions; 2) become a sponsor and receive advertising benefits and tickets to the event; or 3) place an ad in our Farm to Fork Fundraiser advertising journal which is distributed to hundreds of families and local businesses. Attached to this letter you will find forms with details about each opportunity to support America's Grow-a-Row.

Thank you in advance for your continued support and generous contributions.

Very truly yours,

Juls Palmer

AMERICA'S GROW-A-ROW

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

The mission of America's Grow-a-Row (AGAR) is to provide fresh produce to those in need, but who actually does all of the planting? Our volunteers help us plant crops that will be harvested for those in need. Additional and larger plantings are completed with farm machinery due to the size and amount of acreage we currently manage.

How does AGAR harvest all of the acres of fruits and vegetables that are picked throughout the course of the season? Our volunteers pick the crops that are planted to help feed those in need as well as glean through the fields that our local farmers have not been able to harvest. The farm market partners we work with allow us to pick produce they cannot use or have not been able to harvest in order to minimize waste.

How does the AGAR experience teach volunteers about the hunger issues that plague our society? During each of our planting or harvesting sessions, we educate our volunteers, both young and old, about local, national, and international hunger issues and then provide them with a way to be part of the solution.

AGAR is extremely reliant on its volunteers to accomplish its mission. Where does the organization get most of its volunteers? Our volunteer base consists of children and adults in community organizations, schools, religious groups, families, and corporations. AGAR also has been graced with volunteers who have been recipients of our produce through local food pantries or other hunger relief agencies.

Many of the young volunteers who support AGAR live in semi-rural or suburban areas. How does AGAR enable children who live in urban settings to participate in the program? AGAR invites inner-city youth to participate in our program. This provides a day in the country for them as well as an opportunity to experience a real working farm while they pick produce to support their own families and to distribute to their neighbors in need.

What type of hunger relief agencies does AGAR support? AGAR provides fresh produce to hunger relief agencies all across New Jersey. Our program is the largest of its kind in the state and donates fruits and vegetables to food pantries, soup kitchens, food banks, battered women's shelters, group homes, drug rehabilitation centers, and many other similar mission-based organizations.

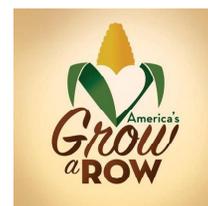

With hundreds of thousands of pounds of fresh produce being delivered to those in need each year, how does AGAR get all of the fruits and vegetables to the hunger relief agencies? AGAR relies on both its volunteers and other hunger relief organizations that already have trucking and delivery infrastructure in place. These collaborative efforts with other non-profit organizations allow us to focus our time, money, and energy primarily on educating our volunteers while preparing them to plant and harvest. Our off-the-field produce rescue program allows local volunteers to deliver produce to select agencies that require smaller amounts of produce than the traditional large quantities that the food banks generally need.

Does AGAR ever cook any of the fruits and vegetables for the hunger relief agencies and their clients? From time to time our team of volunteers prepares and cooks some of our harvest, such as apples. We deliver the food in a way that allows the clients to consume it easily. For example, some of the soup kitchen guests have dental issues, so we convert apples into applesauce for their convenience. Other times we bake items such as zucchini bread if we have an abundance of a particular vegetable.

What key performance indicators are used to evaluate the output and outcomes of the program? Traditionally, AGAR measures our success by the total poundage of produce donated as well as by how many different hunger relief agencies now have access to fresh produce when they did not before. To measure the impact or outputs of the program, we track the number of pounds delivered to each agency. In addition, we track new deliveries to other hunger relief organizations that we did not originally have a working relationship with. Our agencies help us determine the outcome data in terms of the number of clients served. We also conduct a survey of our Free Farm Market recipients to measure outcomes and impact of our program with regard to improved eating habits and resultant improved health.

What funding sources does AGAR rely on in order to keep the program not just functional but also growing? The total program budget is funded by a mix of private donations and foundation grants. In addition to applying for numerous grants to cover our expenses, we have rolled out an Annual Fund Campaign that occurs in the late fall. AGAR also plans several fundraising events throughout the year, such as our Farm to Fork Fundraiser, Pennies 4 Produce, and volunteer recognition Barn Dance.

How does AGAR recognize funders and donors? AGAR recognizes its funders in numerous ways via our website, monthly e-newsletters, and several public media outlets. This recognition can be customized based on our funders' needs. AGAR as an organization has been recognized in statewide and national media over 200 times in print, on TV, and on the radio. As a result, we have cultivated many public relations contacts.

Does AGAR apply for or accept any taxpayer funded programs? AGAR does not accept any government funding, state or federal, and is completely funded via corporate and private donations. Given the recent strain on both the state and federal budgets, our efforts at AGAR to feed those people desperately in need of fresh food without any government assistance are now more important than ever.

Has AGAR been recognized for its mission and successes? AGAR received statewide recognition when our President and Founder, Chip Paillex, was honored as one of New Jersey's "Everyday Heroes" by New Jersey Governor Chris Christie at the Governor's Inauguration. In July 2010, Governor Christie, his staff, and his family came out to our farm in Pittstown, NJ to pick green beans and help those in need. Also in 2010, Chip was awarded the Russ Berrie service award, which included a $50,000 donation to AGAR. Other awards recognizing Chip's efforts with AGAR include the 2007 Jefferson Award for community service, the 2008 Hunterdon County United Way's "Volunteer of the Year" honor, the Bank of America Neighborhood Excellence Initiative Local Hero Award 2011, Appointment to New Jersey Hunger Prevention Advisory Committee 2011, and the Edible Jersey 2012 Local Hero Non-Profit Award.

How severe is the current hunger issue in the state of New Jersey? Currently 1 in 5 New Jersey children is food insecure and 12% of New Jersey residents suffer from hunger. In fact, according to the 2013 Kids Count report issued by Advocates for Children of New Jersey, the number of children in New Jersey depending on the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (formerly known as food stamps) rose 80% between 2008 and 2012.

Why is AGAR so important to the hunger relief organizations it supports and the clients they serve? Many of New Jersey's food pantries, crisis centers, and soup kitchens tell us that the fresh produce received from AGAR is the only nutritional food that their recipients have access to eat.

Briefly speaking, what are the future plans of AGAR? Our goal over the next five years is to completely build out the infrastructure of our newly acquired 138-acre farm. Doing so will allow us to donate at least 1 million pounds of fresh produce annually to those suffering from hunger. Our long-term plan is to seek out future farm sites for continued growth and begin the roll-out of additional AGAR chapters nationwide.
